

Port St George given the green light

It was announced yesterday that the National Economic Council had considered the application for the development of Port St George and had approved in principle the proposed development.

The news, which comes exactly seven weeks after the new Government were elected and just four weeks after the new parliament sat for the first time eliminates concerns that this government were not as inclined to grant planning permission as the previous government.

The lawyers and development team working on behalf of Port St George saw this news as hugely positive and were quick to send congratulations.

The specific details of planning have not yet been announced and more news is expected next week.
